The Busy Body
Kemper Donovan (Kensington)
A very talented ghostwriter signs on to help a failed female presidential candidate (shade of you know who!) write her memoir. Their initial work weekend is going well until there is a mysterious drowning next door. The politician feels called upon to investigate, taking her ghostwriter along—a Watson to her Holmes. An enjoyable mystery tale ensues.

—Joan Hipp, Florham Park Public Library, NJ
NoveList read-alike: The Girl Who Took What She Wanted by Stewart Hoag

First Lie Wins: A Novel
Ashley Elston
(Pamela Dorman Books)
Nothing is ever as it seems in this fast-paced novel. All the reader knows is that nothing about Evie is true. It’s her job to lie and wrangle her way into situations, gather info, and create situations that put others at risk. Yet this time, things are different. During a con, someone shows up with her actual birth name and history. Perfect for readers who enjoy books with twists and turns around every corner.

—Larissa Porach, Jefferson County Public Library, CO
NoveList read-alike: The Lies I Tell by Julie Clark

Divia: A Novel
Daisy Goodwin
(St. Martin’s Press)
Readers get behind the scenes of Maria Callas’s life and her complicated relationships, and hope she may not like what she finds. Callas ended up alone, even with all the money and accolades for her phenomenal soprano voice. This fictional portrait takes some creative license, but that doesn’t detract from this well-researched portrait of an international superstar.

—Sandra Meyers, Frankford Public Library, DE
NoveList read-alike: Jackie & Maria by Gill Paul

The Clinic
Cate Quinn
(Sourcebooks Landmark)
Meg enters an exclusive rehab facility undercover after the supposed suicide of her sister. In the process, she exposes some ugly truths about people who profess to have her best interests at heart. Quinn does a terrific job creating quirky characters and keeping readers guessing. The unexpected twists and eerie location make this a great pick for readers in the mood for atmospheric suspense!

—Michelle Meeks, Wetumpka Public Library, AL
NoveList read-alike: I’ll Be You by Janellie Brown

Come & Get It
Kiley Reid
(G.P. Putnam’s Sons)
Millie is a 24-year-old RA in a dorm of typical college girls. All she wants is to get through her delayed senior year, start saving for a home to call her own, and find a good job for when she graduates. When she makes some increasingly bad choices, she puts all of that in jeopardy and has to face the fact that she may not like the person she is becoming.

—Lindia Quinn, LibraryReads Ambassador
NoveList read-alike: Washala by Nikki May

The Djinn Waits a Hundred Years: A Novel
Shubnum Khan
(Viking)
Hoping for a fresh start after tragedy, Sana and her father move into a South African apartment building with a host of quirky neighbors. Sana becomes fascinated by the story of Meena, a former resident when it was the estate of a wealthy troubled family. A lonely girl, a heartbroken djinn, and long-buried secrets come together in this gorgeously poetic tale of love and grief.

—Mara Bandy Foss, Champaign Public Library, IL
NoveList read-alike: The Last Dreamwalker by Rita Woods

Twenty-Seven Minutes
Ashley Tate
(Poisoned Pen Press)
A young woman died in a car accident while her brother Grant, who was driving, survived, along with another passenger. What really happened that evening is a mystery. Why did Grant wait so long to call for help—and what was his sister so angry about? Readers looking for a page-turning narrative with a strong sense of place will find this compulsive thriller a great read.

—Carri Genovese, Indianapolis Public Library, IN NoveList read-alike: The Only Survivors by Megan Miranda

Who Owns This Sentence?
David Bellos and Alexandre Montagu
(W.W. Norton & Company)

Nonfiction:

The Map of the Otherlands
Heather Fawcett
(Del Rey)
After the events of the first book, Emily sets a new goal of creating the first Map of the Folk. Her plans progress well until an attack from Wendell’s stepmother forces Emily to embark on a quest for an elusive door. Will they find it this time? This fun series installment has fantastical new creatures and realms to discover, and the dynamic between Wendell and Emily is sweet and exciting. Recommended for fans of cozy academia with a dash of magic.
