Business Casual
B. K. Borison (Berkley)
Nova and Charlie belong to each other—and for more than the single spicy night they agree to spend together. This cozy, small-town, friends-to-lovers story has so much warmth and love, making this final installment of the Lovelight Farm series sheer perfection. This is the warmest cuddle of a romance that readers will never want to end.

—Laura Eckert, Clermont County Public Library, OH

The Game Changer
Lana Ferguson (Berkley)
Hockey player Ian is seeking to rehash a sullied reputation, so he teams up with his friend’s little sister Delilah, who’s seeking out the best viewership of her cooking show. Ian’s never considered her a romantic partner, but Delilah’s had a crush on him since she was a teenager. When they reconnect as adults, their relationship quickly heats up.

—Rebecca Whalon, Lakeland Public Library, FL
Novelist read-alike: The Graham Effect by Elle Kennedy

The Next Best Fling
Gabriela Gomez (Forever)
Marcela’s in love with her best friend Ben who’s engaged to another woman (whom Ben’s brother Theo adores). If this love story sounds messy, it is. When Marcela stops Theo from professing his love at Ben’s engagement party, they stumble upon a fake dating predicament and decide to roll with it. This love story feels authentic, and the characters have palpable chemistry.

—Taylor Banze, St. Charles City-County Library, MO
Novelist read-alike: Funny Story by Emily Henry

The Lost Story: A Novel
Meg Shaffer (Ballantine Books)
Jeremy and Rafe disappeared in a West Virginia state park only to reappear six months later without explanation. Jeremy remembers everything but can’t talk about it. Rafe remembers nothing. When a woman needs help to find her sister, the former friends are forced to work together. This character-driven story with intriguing magic should appeal to all fans of portal fantasy.

—Beth Mills, New Rochelle Public Library, NY
Novelist read-alike: Every Heart a Doorway by Seanan McGuire

The Ex Vows
Jessica Joyce (Berkley)
A sweet second chance romance, in which exes Georgia and Eli must cooperate to save their best friend’s wedding. A satisfying story of two people finding their way back to each other, either as friends or something more. An incredibly well-written romance.

—Erin G., Siouxiw Public Library District, OR
Novelist read-alike: The Rule Book by Sarah Adams

Not Another Love Song
Julie Soto (Forever)
Two rival musicians find love in this satisfying enemies-to-lovers story. Xander has everything Gwen wants, and he doesn’t seem to appreciate it. When Gwen is unexpectedly given first-chair violin over him, their rivalry intensifies, reaching a crescendo that leaves Gwen wondering if this is a rewrite to boost viewership. A sexy, lyrical romance.

Novelist read-alike: Kiss Me, Catalina by Priscilla Oliveras

Bury Your Gays
Chuck Tingle (Tor Nightfire)
TV writer Misha has just been given an ultimatum: straighten out his main characters, or let them be queer and kill them off immediately. He refuses, and the ghosts of his own horror-movie past come to haunt him. Highly recommended for any horror fan who’s ever rooted for two queer-coded characters to “just kiss already!”

—Sarah Hawison, Cincinnati & Hamilton County PL, OH
Novelist read-alike: Patricia Wants to Cuddle by Samantha Allen
